Chicago, Illinois

NARA's Great Lakes Region stores and services nearly 4 million cubic feet of active and inactive Federal government records. Historical records preserved in the Chicago facility date from 1800 and provide unique evidence of the impact of Federal policies and programs in the Great Lakes region. The records are diverse in content, covering the Great Lakes and inland waterways, agriculture, Native Americans, the environment, immigration and naturalization, inventions and technology, railroads, the automotive industry, the labor movement, organized crime, the military, domestic conditions during World Wars I and II, sedition and treason, nuclear energy research, and many other subjects.

Program

Continental Breakfast

Briefing on NARA records management, record center and archival operations

Tour of the facility including an extensive records exhibit

Transportation will be provided to and from the National Archives facility.

The FEB bus will depart at 9:30am from the Dearborn Street side of the Kluczynski Federal Building located at 230 South Dearborn St.
